The Paradigm Shift

The Circumstance: (Stated completely neutrally)

How do I feel about this? Use your Feelings Wheel. Look at every single one. Write down all the words that are applicable. Underline the ONE overriding feeling.

What repetitive thought is causing this feeling? One, max two sentences.

How do I act when I think and feel like this? Be as descriptive as possible. What will we see you doing? What won't you be doing? How does it feel in my body? How does it affect my self care, eating, sleeping habits? Relationships? Work? Etc.

What will my results be if I continue acting like this?
Read what you wrote about your actions before you answer this. Where will it end?

Right! Let's shift this!

The Circumstance: (Remains the same - Assume there's nothing you can do about it)

How do I want to feel about this instead?

Look at every single feeling on your Feelings Wheel and write down the applicable ones.
Underline the ONE you want the most..

What do I need to think in order to create this feeling?

One, max two sentences. This is the KEY to shifting.

How do I act when I think and feel like this? Be as descriptive as possible.

What will we see you doing? What won't you be doing? How does it feel in my body?
How does it affect my self care, eating, sleeping habits? Relationships? Work? Etc.

Now, what will my results be if I act like this?

Read what you wrote about your actions before you answer this. Where will it end?

So much better, right?! Keep managing your thoughts about this circumstance.
